

POINT OF VIEW

The Bone Grits' Historeum Mist

We're thrilled to share this Teachers Guide with you and your students!
Please feel free to contact us with any questions you may have:

cobblehousemedia@shaw.ca

Enjoy!

Copyright © 2018 by Cobble House Literacy
All rights reserved.

This work or any portion thereof may not be reproduced for commercial use in any manner whatsoever without the express written permission of CobbleHouse Literacy.

If you wish to modify the work for direct use in the classroom, please feel free.

CobbleHouse Media

bonegrits.com

Points of View

Who is telling the story?

First Person

One of the characters tells the story through their eyes.
This point of view uses 'I' and 'We'

Third Person Omniscient

This is a point of view where the narrator knows all the thoughts, actions, and feelings of all characters. It uses 'He', 'She' and 'They'

Third Person Limited

The narrator only knows the thoughts and feelings of one character. All characters are described using 'they', 'he', and 'she'. But, one character is closely followed throughout the story.

Points of View

Who is telling the story?

Read the following excerpts from Miist.

Root wondered if this hadn't been the clever work of Madam Mordgidika Keen.

Root thought it odd that the mouse didn't run, but instead stood there, twitching its little nose and whiskers as it looked up at her.

Root thought he had lost his marbles for there was nothing on his shoulder.

Root felt bumps ignite across her arms. She smiled and stepped from the trees.

Fledger sipped his tea and shook his head as he watched her run along the boardwalk.
"Yes, happy Birthday, my little Wuddelump."

And while Root fell soundly asleep to the dance of wind and rain outside her window, Madam Mordgidika Keen stood at her own window, watching the storm as if it were hiding something terrible in its clouds.

Krism watched Root. There was something about her, this strange girl with pumpkin gold hair. A few cobwebs began to clear from the deep hollows of his mind.

Klud was pleased with his victory.

Which Point of View is Kamilla Reid using and why?

---

---

---

---

